Comet

The area surrounding Alhambra RV Park sits in an alluvial plain of granite and sediment creating amazing rock formations and a rich environment for the forests and wild life calling the area home. But in the mid-1800's it was discovered the rocks contain many useful minerals, including vast rich deposits of gold and other precious metals.

The rush was on! Boom towns sprung up close to large finds all over the area some at high elevations in remote, hard to reach locations. Some of these towns boasted populations in ten's of thousands with railroad service, shops with luxury items from all over the world, and a diverse population of cultures with pioneers seeking their fortunes with their families attempting to build a future.

When the mines started to play out or production costs exceeded the mineral yields, these towns died for the most part as quickly as they were born. But the scars and evidence of the past last long after the crowds disappeared. Experience a taste of the old west and get a sense of the excitement as well as the bitter hardship of life on the frontier by visiting the nearby ghost town.

Where to go:

Elkhorn

If you only have time to visit one of these locations, Elkhorn is a unique Ghost Town experience. There are no tourist facilities except some bathrooms and a picnic area. The ruins are lovingly maintained by the few residents still calling this town home. The dance and fraternity halls are fully restored and open for you to explore unhindered to your heart's content. Be sure to drive up the hill and see the old water tower. Follow the road to the cemetery and witness the loss and despair of the diphtheria epidemic that took the lives of many of the area's children at the turn of the century.

Comet

Comet is the privately owned remains of a mine and ore processing facility near the continental divide. You are able to explore the area from your vehicle, but please do not enter the buildings without seeking per-

-mission from the land owners. 4WD owners can attempt the jeep trail through Wicks and see other mining relics on their way.

Rimini

This town is the living remnants of a mining camp west of Helena. No public facilities are available, but visitors to Park Lake can try the 4WD road over the mountains for a beautiful and fun drive.

There many other scattered remnants of history in the area. Explore any trail and you're likely to find something of interest.
